Debate in Parliament on the Address. London, January 16th .- Parliament was opened to day by the King in person. His Majesty, in his Speech from the Throne, said that the Prince and Princess of Wales had been received everywhere on their tour with demonstrations of the liveliest, affection; and His Majesty was convinued that their presence had surved to rivet more closely the bunds of that mutual regard and loyalty whereby the vigour of the Empire is maintained. His Majosty then said that his relations with the Powers continue friendly. The area of the War in South Africa had been largely reduced, and industries were being resumed in the new Colonies. 'My soldiers throughout have displayed checifulness in the endurance of the bardships of guerilla warfare, and their humanity, even to their-own detriment, in the treatment of the enemy, is deserving of the highest praise.' His Majesty hoped that the Sugar Conference would lead to the abandon. ment of bounties whereby the sugar producing Colonies and home manufacturers were unfairly weighted.

The accessity of relieving the troops who had most feltithe strain of the war had afforded un opportunity of again accupting loyal and patriotic offers from the Colonies, and futher contingents would shortly reach Africa from Canada, Australia and New The rainfall in India had been less abund-

Replying to a question from Lord Spencer-who admitted that Boer independence was out of the question - Lord Salisbury rejected the idea that we should say on what terms we forgave our assulants, who gratuitously and unreasonably attacked us, and who had constantly repudiated the notion of suing for peace. He warned his hourers against the acceptance of a conditional surrender which would permit of the intrigues of foreigners and the accumulation of armsments leading to a recurrence of the struggle. He denied that there had been overtures on behalf of Lord Rosebery, during the debate, commended Mr Chamberlain's reply to Count von Buelow; but declared that the hostility of the continent was unparalleled. Lord Landowne said that the reduction of the British troops in China, which at persent numbered 6 000, would depend on the condition of the country and the action of other Powers. after conducting the examination, I was from an extravagant demand. able truthfully to say to Sir John Pope Hennessy that I was surprised at the success of Chibese hoys in coping with the difficulties of the English burguage ; and may add that this impression has not fador but on the conteary has been confirmed with increased experience. That a Chinese boy should in ave years advance from the study of the Alphabet to an intelligent acquaintance with a play of Shakespeare and a period of English History is to me little short of the miraculous; when due allowando is made for the novelty of the simplest ideas, which are conveyed in idioms without parallel in his own languago,

4. The chief points of contrast between the Examination held by me in 1882 (which) naturally is indelibly printed on my brain) and the Examination just concluded, are as follows. The papers now are nearly all clean and remarkably well written; whereas twenty years ago these were the exception, the uniority of papers being dirty and almost illegible. The standard now applied is infinitely severer: in 1882, the action of the gauge was very delicate and sympathetio; e.g. if from a hepolose translat on you to pass; in Composition three sentences grammatically correct constituted the test of a pass, irrespondence of subject matter in Arithmetic, there was an allowance for method, which was supposed to compone for a wrong digit in even a total or product; beyond all this a personal element. was introduced into the equation in the case of delicate or weak-minded beys, or of hoys whose attendances and been afficied by sickness or other cause. I objected to anything but a rigid uniform standard being applied to all slike; and maintained, that in mathematical subjects, except for some slight elerical error, no leniency could be shown. The severer standard was 213-

One outcome of this general raising of the standard of education in Queen's College has been that for the last twelve years, through entering for the Oxford Local Examinations our boys have, with varying success, been able to submit to a test of their English attainments by English Examiners in Eng-

DRAFT STEAMERS.

TERNWHEEL STEAMERS have been found by experience to be the best type of vessel for shallow river navigation under many conditions of working, and of these Mesers. Yakuow have built a very large number of successful examples for all parts of the world.

Vessels on this system are constructed when required, to draw as little as 10 inches. The construction of shallow river vessels propelled on various systems has been made the speciality of Mossrs, YARROW & Co., LTD. For particulars apply to-
